

Dan Myers

After 6 years of service with the U.S. Marine Corps, Dan Myers joined the Product Service Engineering group of the Visual Simulation Systems division of McDonnell Douglas in 1979. In the mid 1980s, Dan became involved with the design and development of the VITAL VII, specifically in areas of texture, phototexture and database design. Subsequently, Dan went on to manage the VITAL Database department for approximately 3 years. In August 1990, he was appointed as a Marketing Manager. FlightSafety acquired the Visual Systems division in 1993 and in 1999 Dan was promoted to Director of Marketing. He continues to serve in this capacity today, with added responsibilities for military business development for FlightSafety Simulation. Dan has also proudly served as the Vice President of the IMAGE Society for many years.

For fun, Dan enjoys flying and boating.
